INTRODUCTION

- Britannia is a trusted household brand in India.
- Eating habits are shifting toward healthier, low-sugar snacks.
- Newer brands with “clean” ingredients appeal to health-conscious buyers.
- This study examines why some consumers are moving away from Britannia.

OBJECTIVES OF THE STUDY

- To understand why health-conscious buyers are shifting away from Britannia.
- To study how changing snacking habits influence biscuit choices.
- To compare Britannia with competitors offering “healthier” options.
- To identify strategies that can help Britannia regain loyalty in this segment.

MARKET ANALYSIS

Grew 45% YoY in healthy snacking sales.

Holds 8–10% share in premium cookies.

Accounts for 12% of India's cookie market.

Sold in 80%+ general trade stores

Healthy range contributes 7–8% of Britannia's biscuit sales.

FIELD RESEARCH FINDINGS

Brand	Shelf Visibility	Variants Available	Placement in Store
Britannia NutriChoice	Low (1/5 stores)	2–3	Regular biscuit aisle
Parle Nutricrunch	Medium (3/5 stores)	3–4	Regular + value section
Unibic	High (3/5 stores)	6–7	Healthy snacks aisle
Yoga Bar	Very High (4/5 stores)	5–6	Healthy snacks aisle
Sunfeast	Medium (3/5 stores)	4–5	Healthy snacks aisle

COMPETITIVE LANDSCAPE

- Strong trust and wide reach
- Affordable pricing
- Low visibility in healthy snacks aisle

- Many flavour and oats variants
- Strong shelf presence
- Slightly sweeter than typical “healthy” options

- Very affordable and widely available
- Simple, no-frills packaging
- Moderate health perception

- Balanced taste and clean packaging
- Good presence in modern retail
- Medium variety in healthy range

- Clean-label, low sugar, high protein
- Best visibility in healthy aisle
- Higher price point

KEY RECOMMENDATIONS & CONCLUSION

Recommendations:

- Improve NutriChoice visibility in healthy snack aisles.
- Introduce clearer low-sugar, high-fibre or millet-based products.
- Refresh packaging with strong health claims.
- Use influencers and digital promotions to highlight nutritional benefits.

Conclusion:

If Britannia strengthens its healthy biscuit range and communicates more clearly, it can win back health-conscious consumers and stay competitive in the fast-growing healthy snacking market.
